Design students make their boats float

COLLIN HESTER/MUSTANG DAILY

Architecture sophomore Gaylen Herman paddles to victory in her boat for the Cardboard Boat Regatta at the Rec Center pool Saturday. Thirty-four architecture design sophomores designed boats made of cardboard, brown paper tape and polyurethane waterproofing.

Cal Poly architecture students row, row, rowed their cardboard boats, not so gently, down the Rec Center pool on Saturday.

It was all part of the Cardboard Regatta Race, a boat competition in which students competed with hand-made cardboard boats. The boats were made to hold the students, who rowed them across the pool in the race.

"This is a real design problem because the students are dealing with minimal materials," said Henry Weisenthal, one of two architecture professors who directed the event. "This is also a construction problem because they have to learn how to use the materials correctly."

Each of the 34 participants was given only three materials to work with in constructing a boat for the race. They were given two sheets of cardboard (4 feet by 6 feet), brown paper tape and clear polyurethane waterproofing.

"It is amazing how different the designs were even though they were given the same amount of material," Weisenthal said.

The students only had one week to work on the project, and the only way

Police arrest Stenner Glen rape suspect

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF REPORT

An 18-year-old female escaped rape in her Stenner Glen apartment Saturday morning after she kicked the attacker and notified police.

Police arrested Thomas Hayes, 19, of Agoura Hills for attempted rape, burglary and unlawful sexual penetration, according to a San Luis Obispo Police Department press release.

The female, whose name could not be released, was awakened at 3:40 a.m. on Saturday by Hayes as he attempted to rape her, according to the press release. She kicked him in the groin and then locked herself in the bathroom.

Hayes allegedly left the female's room, and the victim ran to a pay phone where she notified police of the attempted rape, according to the press release.

Security personnel at Stenner Glen stopped Hayes and retained him until the police arrived, accord-

Suspect in horse theft in custody

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF REPORT

The man suspected in the September horse theft from Cal Poly's rodeo grounds turned himself in Thursday.

According to a University Police press statement, Steven Pate, 31, of Tehachapi in Kern County turned himself in to the Kern County Sheriff's Department after being contacted by University Police.

Pate is the suspected thief of four rodeo horses stolen on Sept. 27, all of which had been recovered by Oct. 14 after being sold. The total value of the horses was $45,000, according to the University Police press statement.

Following the thefts, the University Police investigation continued until enough evidence had been gathered for the San Luis Obispo Superior Court to issue a $10,000 felony arrest warrant against Pate.

Pate is charged with four counts of felony grand theft of horses and one count of felony possession of stolen property.

As of Friday's press statement, Pate is expected to either post bail or be transported to San Luis Obispo County.

The case has been sent to the San Luis Obispo County District Attorney's office for review and prosecution.

Students spin issues on radio

By Raul Vasquez
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

It has been said by some that most of today's college students are apathetic about politics, and that most students just don't care. But two Cal Poly students are trying to shatter all those stereotypes.

Political science seniors Paul Herman and Eddie Drake co-host a weekly political talk show called "Spin Cycle" Saturdays from 6 to 7 p.m. on 1340 AM KGLW.

"We call it 'Spin Cycle' because we take an issue and spin it, and we try to convince the audience to agree with our viewpoints," Drake said.

The show features an open discussion of current national political news and events, and people are encouraged to call in with their opinions.

"The goal of the show is to get people, especially college students, to raise their voices and start paying attention to what's happening around them," Herman said.

What makes the show even more interesting is that the two co-hosts have opposing political views; Herman is a Republican and Drake is a Democrat.

The duo have been known to yell at each other on the air for 30 minutes or more, but it never gets personal, Herman said.

"Paul and I have a great time doing the show," Drake added.

Herman was originally the only host, but after a guest appearance by Drake, the station manager suggested

Visitors to PAC get rare tour behind scenes

By Janelle Fosskett
MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

It has only been open since 1996, yet it has already seen some of the Central Coast's finest performances — both musically and theatrically. From its modern exterior to its complex inner operations, the Performing Arts Center has become an integral part of the Cal Poly campus.

Yesterday the community had the opportunity to experience areas of the PAC usually only seen by performers and PAC employees.

From 1 to 5 p.m., the Christopher Cohan Center was open for a self-guided tour of the behind-the-scenes activities and intricacies of the center.

"This is a good way to introduce the facility to the community," said Nancy Cochran, theater operations manager. "This might get people excited about attending a show."

The Christopher Cohan Center includes a concert hall with 1,282 seats, the pavilion and a 170-seat recital hall. The 497-seat Cal Poly Theater and the Christopher Cohan Center together make up the Performing Arts Center.

The annual tour of the Christopher Cohan Center included a look at ticketing, sound engineering, the lighting control system and spotlight operations. Visitors were also able to climb up into the chandelier and down into the orchestra pit and trap room they could pass was if their boat stayed afloat from one side of the pool to the other, Weisenthal said.

"I think that it is important for the person to be involved with the project and to have that human interaction," he said.

Gaylen Herman, an architecture sophomore, won the cup after winning the final race against approximately four other boats.

This is the first year that a "cardboard cup" trophy was given to the first-place winner.

"The biggest challenge for a lot of people was to be able to just keep the boat straight and afloat," Herman said. "You really had to take into account the volume of your weight and the weight of the cardboard."

Barry Williams, an architecture professor who co-directed the race, said the only thing students were given to test their boats was the archimedes' principle of buoyancy, an equation that guided the students in balancing their weight with that of the water.

"We tried to tell them as they were working on the project that folded cardboard holds better than straight, and some of them listened and some of them didn't," he said.

The Cardboard Regatta Race has been held for the past 30 years, although it hasn't run every year. In past years, it has taken place at Laguna Lake.

Patrick Hoesterey, an architecture sophomore, came in fourth place. "A lot of people don't see how this race is connected to architecture, but it is when you think of it, as you have to make your boat functional and good-looking," he said.

Hoesterey said that everyone made predictions on Friday about who would win. Most of the predictions were right, he said.

Weisenthal tried to have his students build a full-size project every quarter. He said he thought this was a good project for students to take responsibility for their own design decisions.

Mirba Estrellás, an architecture sophomore, won second place.

"I had never done anything like this before," she said. "I was optimistic that the boat would go, but I didn't know how fast it would be."

Weisenthal said that it was amazing because at first, the students didn't think that the project was possible, but then when they succeeded, it showed them the power of design once they put their minds to it.

Michael DeMarco came in third place.

Disney park opens with scare

ANAHEIM (AP) — A smoking electrical panel triggered a fire alarm, prompting an evacuation of Disneyland's newest attraction.

"The alarm went off in the new California Adventure section and the Fire Department was called to the scene," said police Sgt. Hector Hidalgo.

No one was hurt during the 7:30 p.m. emergency. The California Adventure ride, previewed by park hotel guests and season passholders, reopened later, and will officially open Thursday. Disneyland proper remained open throughout.

Employees evacuated a movie theater and simulation ride when smoke came up a ventilation system and began clouding an IMAX giant screen.

Movigoers experiencing the "Soarin' over California" hang-gliding film were ushered out. There were no flames, said Disneyland spokesman Ray Gomez.

"We called the Fire Department as a precaution," Gomez added.

The computer-controlled electrical panel is in the basement of the theater. An amplifier connected to the panel overheated and caused the smoke, he said.

"Soarin' over California" has about 90 seats which elevate and move side to side to give the viewer a simulated hang-gliding ride.

Hayes was arrested and taken to the San Luis Obispo County Jail.

Sgt. Brown of the police department said the female's door was open, but he did not know how Hayes entered the apartment complex.

Brown wasn't sure if the suspect or the victim was a Cal Poly student.

The incident is still under investigation, according to the press release.

beneath the stage. The chandelier is approximately five stories above the main auditorium floor, and it houses spotlights used to illuminate the stage.

Many non-technical rooms in the PAC were open, including the dressing rooms and the Colleen Moore Green Room, named after the silent screen star.

People were also able to see a wall signed by many of the performance groups that have come to the PAC such as the casts of "The Nutcracker," "Cats," "Stomp" and "Grease."

Shirley Horacek of Nipomo came to the tour because she has been to many performances at the PAC.

"This is a fantastic center," she said. "I am very impressed with it, so I wanted to see it all."

Visitors were able to learn interesting facts about the PAC operations. For example, the spotlights in the followspot room burn at one-sixth the heat of the sun, said spot Operator Terri Hopson.

Production Coordinator Eli Zabala revealed that hidden underneath the stage are many rows of seats that can be moved up to the main floor depending on how the stage is configured for a particular performance.

House managers were available to explain their duties, discuss how they prepare the center for an event and talk of their reasons for putting on such a tour.

"We hope to give the community, and hopefully students, a chance to see what operations are like backstage," said Chris McBride, outreach services manager. "Hopefully when people are sitting in the audience, they are wondering what is going on backstage."

Higher Movement Dance and Drum troupe performed in front of the PAC at 1:30 p.m. The event was co-hosted by local radio stations KOTR and KXTZ.

the two team up.

"The station manager talked to the both of us, and he thought that it would be a good idea to have a continuous debate," Drake explained.

The show has had a good response from the public, mainly from an older audience.

"We're trying to attract more college-age listeners because many are apathetic about politics in this country," Herman said.

Herman and Drake share a passion for politics and have been politically active on a national and local level for several years.

The show is being done as a part of their senior projects, but they both would have done the show regardless, they said. They hope that the show will help them enter the political arena.

"My passion and hobby is politics, and talk radio is a great place to share my opinions," Herman said.

Herman and Drake will conduct a publicity campaign on the Cal Poly campus and pass out fliers promoting the show. They will also conduct "man on the street" interviews at the University Union, which will be aired on the show.

What are those random pictures that are sometimes run on the front page?

Sometimes the stories we have for the front page do not necessarily have the opportunity for good photographs. In these cases, we take "wild art" shots and use them without stories.

Even though there may be photos available for a story we may be running, we always like to find the most interesting pictures possible. People sitting at a board meeting, or a group posed in front of a sign, for instance, are not our favorites - they are quite boring, in fact.

What we like to do with our photographs is allow them to tell a story on their own. Often, we go out and take shots of people on campus doing unusual things, or doing normal things in unusual ways.

These are then run with a caption to help you appreciate what is going on.

These "human interest shots" can tell a story that we are not going to actually write about, but are interesting nonetheless.

Wild art lets us capture student life in and around campus in ways articles never could.

Deaf DC student stabbed to death in college dorm

WASHINGTON (AP) — A student found dead in his dorm room at Gallaudet University, a school for the hearing-impaired, was stabbed to death, District of Columbia police said Sunday.

Benjamin Varner, 19, of San Antonio, Texas, had multiple stab wounds to the head and body, said police spokesman Sgt. Joe Gentile.

He was found Saturday morning in a fourth-floor dorm room of Cogswell Hall. That is the same dormitory where freshman Eric F. Plunkett, 19, of Burnsville, Minn., was found beaten to death in a first-floor room Sept. 28.

Police Chief Charles Ramsey said there is no evidence of a link between the two deaths, but investigators are looking into the possibility that there could be a connection.

Security was tight at the campus Sunday. University police checked student IDs and wrote down the license plates of vehicles entering the campus.

A fellow student originally was charged with second-degree murder in the Plunkett case, but the charges were dropped the next day. District of Columbia police said at the time that two freshmen had a dispute that erupted into a physical fight that led to the beating death of one of the male students.

At the urging of police, the university beefed up security over the weekend. Visitors and students could only enter and exit campus through one of five gates.

Ask yourself if your time is really worth it

How many of you have been in this situation: you are driving and lost in thought or listening to music or talking with a friend and going a little slow when your serenity is interrupted by a guy honking his horn and yelling at you with his middle digit flashing out the window. It's happened to me a few times, and that's my complaint.

Why is everyone in America so impatient? I've been in fast food restaurants, and if the order of five burgers, three fries and three Cokes takes longer than five minutes, someone is frustrated. I've driven with some saintly people who curse like nobody's business during traffic. It seems as if the slightest inconvenience sets someone off. Impatience isn't confined to waiting either; it also appears when someone gets upset over small matters. I would guess millions of roommates have gotten upset over dishes or eating habits or music. Americans seem to want things their way NOW.

Who knows why this happens? Some people have probably learned that if they are impatient, they'll get their way. I've used this tactic, bugging some poor high school girl to get me my Whopper because my stomach was growling. Others probably have put an inflated value on their time, feeling that wasted time in a checkout line is highway robbery. Some people feel things should be done their way, or it's the highway. Others are just high strung, only able to go one speed — light speed.

What's sad is that this impatience is ingrained in our culture. Businesses need everything done by yesterday. Computers, planes and media are all pressured to deliver faster and faster. This constant hurry is stressful, at least to me. Sometimes I wish I lived in a Latin culture, where things move a little slower and people take their time. I lived in Mexico last summer for a month and a half and no one seemed to mind waiting in long lines for the metro or for their food. As Americans, it is easy to learn the habit of impatience.

"So what?" you say. This is the question I want you to ask yourself: Is this really worth getting upset over? Think about it; is waiting an extra minute or two for your food worth getting irritated over? Is driving the speed limit something worth yelling about? I don't think so. Get angry over something that is a real shame. Pound your fist over injustice, racism, violence or disrespect, not a slow computer or printer. Be patient with your roommate's music and dirty laundry. Remind yourself of all the annoying habits you might have.

I'm not saying don't stand up for yourself, just be calm and talk things over with people instead of trying to intimidate them with fire coming out of your mouth and eyes. Talking with your friends and reaching compromises is a good and healthy thing.

Seeking to save time is always wise. But road rage isn't necessary. None of us like it when someone gets angry over a little mistake. Just ask yourself, is it worth it?

Andrew Paulsen is a history senior.

Flaming idiots imitate 'Jackass'

A 13-year-old boy lies critically injured, with burns covering much of his body. He received his injuries when his friend poured gasoline on him and set him on fire. They were imitating a stunt they had seen on the MTV series "Jackass."

We need to consider the fact that this boy is in critical condition. But let's not immediately try to find a scapegoat, because there isn't one. That boy, or someone like him, would have imitated the same stunt from another television show, movie or commercial. "Jackass" is not to blame. I have seen the show's television rating in the corner of the television screen, and the straight-forward warning that begins every program.

We can turn with fury and frustration toward MTV, a network that seems bent on catering to both the best and worst instincts of teen-agers, or we can look at the real problem and make sure parents know what their children are watching. "Jackass" is one of the funniest and daring shows I have ever seen. The reason it's so fascinating to the audience is because it captivates viewers by showing stunts that not everyone would do.

In "Jackass," Johnny Knoxville goes one step beyond MTV's popular prankster Tom Green in doing life-endangering stunts in the service of real-life comedy. He often gets his friends to do things like riding a bicycle into bramble bushes. But it's only Knoxville himself who does some intentionally idiotic things, such as pepper-spraying his eyes or jumping across a canal. One of the most horrifying, and by far the most memorable, stunts is Knoxville immersing and showering himself in a Port-O-Potty. Even though I almost threw up watching him drenched in other people's mess, I wanted to see more of his stunts in his next show. Because of these fascinating stunts, his show was launched as one of the most watched shows on MTV.

We need a show like "Jackass" to run between Britney Spears videos and "Making the Video" documentaries. "The Tom Green Show" was the start of real-life pranks on MTV, like the episode in which he acted like he was on crutches and kept falling in the street. We all love to laugh, and when we see someone trip or fall, we start laughing. You may not admit it to others, but it's the truth.

Two weeks ago, I saw a guy fall flat on his face after running down a hill at school. My first reaction was laughter. Then I was going to ask him if he was OK, but he was so embarrassed he got up and started running again. It's not that we don't care about the well-being of that person, we are simply humored when someone farts in public or runs into a sliding door thinking it's opened.

I'll admit, I was laughed at once, too. I was going to the mall in my work clothes and I started running up the escalator. The next thing I know, I tripped and fell, almost hitting my head on the step of the escalator. I ripped my nylons and my toe was bleeding, and the guys going down the escalator could do nothing but laugh at me. It was humiliating, but all I could do was laugh at myself to hide the embarrassment. So when we see embarrassing things on television an ordinary person wouldn't do, we are fascinated by them.

Most people wouldn't suck on a cow's nipple, like Tom Green, because it's disgusting. Others wouldn't pretend to be crippled in a wheelchair and fall down stairs. When we see someone else do it on television, we are hooked by the sense of humor and creativity these individuals have.

Let's face it, we watch "Jackass," listen to Howard Stern and see numerous gory decapitation scenes in movies for pure entertainment. Most of the population of this country is sane and would never attempt the kind of things we see in the media.

We all need a scapegoat when terrible things happen, especially when they happen to young children. It is up to parents to sit with their children and help them understand that things on television are not meant to be practiced in real life. The networks put up warning signs for children and have a rating system.

People have to understand that just as there is a place for those conservative people watching "The West Wing," there is also a place for the jackasses in the world.

Letter to the editor

I never saw the dark side of my friend

Editor,

The events that happened last Monday in San Jose, where 19-year-old Al Deguzman was arrested by the San Jose Police Department hours before he was to detonate homemade bombs at De Anza College, have left me speechless. Never in my wildest dreams could I have pictured Al doing something like this; he was always polite and quiet. Where was this dark and sad side of him hiding all these years?

To students here at Cal Poly, Al Deguzman is probably just another product of a dysfunctional family or perhaps a product of the social-climatic environment that he grew up in. But to those people who knew him in high school, the events have left us totally shocked. He was always joking around; you could never really take him too serious. But deep inside he was living a second life, a life filled with hatred and rage that, on Wednesday afternoon, he was planning to set loose on 14,000 of his fellow students.

Sometimes I stop and think this is just a prank, a joke, or perhaps just a bad dream, and that everything will be OK for Al. However, the evidence tends to point otherwise. It leaves me thinking if I should've taken the jokes he used to tell more seriously. Should I have done something different?

He was quoted as saying the following on one of his Web sites: "(The World is full of bullies) ... cursing at people for the stupidest things. Would you still do that if you knew that quiet kid who you taunt as you pass him on the street could whip out his newly acquired .44-caliber hand cannon?" Makes you think of those childhood kids that you used to pick on. They could be capable of doing something like this.

Barak, Sharon battle out final days before election

JERUSALEM (AP) — An angry and dejected Israeli electorate faces a stark choice this week between Prime Minister Ehud Barak and his push for a final peace deal with the Palestinians, and the hawkish front-runner Ariel Sharon, who won a boost Sunday when he was endorsed by Israel's ultra-Orthodox bloc.

The deck seems heavily stacked in favor of Sharon, a 72-year-old ex-general who promises to quash the four-month Palestinian uprising and cede no more land. He has led in all the polls for weeks by about 20 points — a massive spread in a country that for decades has been deeply divided more or less down the middle.

Sharon received more good news when newspapers representing Ashkenazi ultra-Orthodox parties, composed of Jews of European background, published announcements from the religious leadership calling on people to vote for him.

A victory for the burly ex-general in Tuesday's election would be an astounding rehabilitation for a man whose leadership hopes were widely considered dashed when a government commission indirectly blamed him for a 1982 massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees in Beirut, Lebanon, and forced him to resign as defense minister.

It would also appear to slam the brakes on the current peace process. Sharon has made clear that he opposes Barak's offers to the Palestinians and would withdraw them in favor of less ambitious interim deals emphasizing security for Israelis.

Sharon has been vague about his plans. However, he is a lifelong hawk who has opposed the land-for-peace idea and has been a leading patron of the Jewish settler movement. A Sharon plan leaked to Israeli media last month envisions giving the Palestinians no more land — but also building no more settlements.

Barak has predicted a peace accord is within reach despite the recent setbacks — but he has also warned that if the Palestinians don't soften their demands he will forgo efforts to reach agreement and unilaterally redraw the map, dismantling some settlements and keeping others.

Many observers believe that whoever wins will have difficulty maintaining a majority coalition in the fractured parliament, and that general elections for prime minister and parliament are almost inevitable within a year.

ran into it – I hit a good pitch," Tillman said.

First baseman Matt Milwee followed with a homerun of his own in the fifth inning, which gave the Mustangs a 6-4 lead at the time.

San Diego scored three runs in the seventh to tie the game, 7-7, but it was short-lived when Cal Poly's bats came alive in the eighth.

The hitting bailed out the erratic Mustang pitching staff that gave up 10 walks Sunday.

"I'm a little concerned with the number of walks. Brian (Haskell) fell behind hitters today and that's how he gets himself in trouble," said head coach Ritch Price. "But it's been a great weekend and a great first month to the season."

With the victory Sunday, Cal Poly won the three-game series and improved to 6-1.

In Friday's game, the Mustangs scored the go-ahead run in the bottom of the eighth inning on a Torero error and Quinn McGinnis shut the door in the ninth to give Cal Poly the victory, 6-5.

The game featured Baggett

Stadium's first home run – San Diego shortstop Josh Harris hit a solo shot off reliever Nathan Choate to lead off the seventh inning.

Harris' home run tied the game at five, and in the bottom of the eighth, Gant scored the winning run after catcher S.C. Asseal threw the ball into left field while trying to force Gant out at third.

On Saturday, San Diego snapped the Mustangs' five-game winning streak with a 9-2 victory behind designated hitter Lucas Wennersten's two RBI and two runs scored.

Tyler Fitch was credited with the loss after giving up three runs in 5 and one-third innings work. San Diego put the game away with four runs in the seventh inning after the Mustangs pulled to 3-2 after the sixth inning.

UCLA looks to turn around season after Stanford upset

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) – Once the standard for supremacy, UCLA has needed big upsets the last two years at top-ranked Stanford to rescue mediocre seasons.

On Saturday, the unranked Bruins were coming off a 29-point loss at California when they topped the No. 1 Cardinal 79-73 – beating the nation's last undefeated team.

A year ago, UCLA was at risk of missing the NCAA tournament when it came to Stanford late in the season and beat the nation's No. 1 team in overtime.

"It's funny how UCLA seems to struggle, but when they come here they play well," said Stanford guard Casey Jacobsen, who led the Cardinal with 17 points but was hassled into 4-of-18 shooting. "They're a completely different team when they play us versus what we see of them on TV."

The Bruins (13-6) certainly didn't look much like the team that fell behind by 20 points at halftime to Cal. Or the team that lost at home to tiny Cal State-Northridge earlier this season.

"Stanford has caught us in consecutive years at bad times," explained UCLA coach Steve Lavin, who was greeted by chants of "Rick Pi-ti-no" before Saturday's game.

Pitino, the former Kentucky and Boston Celtics coach, talked briefly with UCLA athletic director Peter Dalis in recent weeks before assuring Lavin he had no intention of trying to take his job.

The unlikely hero Saturday for the 11-time NCAA-champion

Bruins was surprise starter Billy Knight, who was averaging 3.8 points per game this season but opened the game with a 3-pointer and went on to score 22 points.

Knight, who had reached double figures only once before this season and had a previous career high of 15, was making his fifth start of the season.

The usual starter at shooting guard is Jason Flowers, but Lavin remembered that Knight played well last season on the trip to Northern California. Knight's play off the bench helped the Bruins rally from a 19-point deficit to win at Cal last season, and he then hit three key 3-pointers in the upset at Stanford.

"Last year he kind of turned our season around in the Bay area," Lavin said. "It's like, if you have a hunch, you bet a bunch. It was a longshot today, but he came up big. Like a pinch-hitter, he goes for long stretches without playing, but he's ready when called upon."

Earl Watson, who had 20 points for the Bruins, said Knight was nearly unstoppable from 3-point range in a Friday scrimmage. So his teammates knew he was hot, even if Stanford (20-1) was caught by surprise.

"Billy definitely has that ability. I think he threw Stanford off,"

Watson said. "Stanford had no idea who he was."

Knight went 8 of 15 from the field, including three 3-pointers. His last, from far beyond the top of the key as the 35-second clock ran down, came after Stanford took its only lead of the second half.

"Everybody thought we were going to lose except us. We just beat the No. 1 team – there's no one better than that," Knight said.

Stanford again showed it is vulnerable against quick, athletic teams. Its school-record 20-game winning streak is finished and the focus now shifts to winning the Pac-10, where the Cardinal lead Arizona by a half-game and the Bruins by a game.

Mustang blowout at Baggett

By Bryce Alderton

MUSTANG DAILY CONTRIBUTOR

The hitting bug was contagious Sunday in Baggett Stadium as the Cal Poly baseball team broke the game wide open with a nine-run eighth inning en route to a 17-8 victory against the University of San Diego.

Center fielder Jason Barringer doubled in three runs in the eighth and had six RBI for the game.

"I felt good during batting practice today and I'm seeing the ball a lot better," Barringer said. "Hitting is contagious; Kevin (Tillman) got everyone going with the home run."

Tillman hit San Diego starter Aaron Wilson's 2-1 fastball over the right-center-field wall in the second inning for the first home-run hit by a Mustang in Baggett Stadium, which tied the game 1-1.

"I was expecting something hard and I got a low fastball and

Weekend of action for Mustangs

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF REPORT

Men's basketball

Cal Poly earned its first Big West Conference victory with a 82-79 overtime win against Idaho Saturday night.

Chris Bjorklund and Watende Favors led the Mustangs with 20 points apiece, as Cal Poly improved its record to 7-12, 1-7 in conference.

Wrestling

Cal Poly evened its Pac-10 Conference record at 3-3 with a 28-7 defeat of UC Davis Saturday. The Mustangs won eight of the ten matches at the meet.

Earlier in the day, the Mustangs dominated San Francisco State, 32-3. Cal Poly won nine of ten matches, including a win in overtime by Steve Strange.

Women's Indoor Track

In Reno, the Cal Poly women's indoor track and field team kicked off their season with a strong performance at the Wolf Pack Invitational.

Jen DeRego set the pace for the Mustangs with a first-place finish in the 3,000 meters. Stephanie Brown finished second in the shotput after missing last season due to injury.

Swimming

UC Irvine swept both the men's and women's swim teams on Friday at Mott Pool. The men fell 165.5 to 136.5, and the women lost 168.0 to 124.0.

Matt Patane and Matthew Larson had victories for the Mustangs, and Mary Thomas and Stacy Peterson paced the women's team.

Women's Basketball

In Stockton on Sunday, Cal Poly fell to the University of the Pacific Tigers 69-57. With the loss, Cal Poly's record dropped to 8-12 overall, 2-5 in the Big West Conference.

Long Beach State jumped out to a 21-point lead in the second half and held off two Cal Poly rallies to defeat the Mustangs 80-70 on Friday night.

The 49ers shot 49 percent from the field for the game, while Cal Poly shot 42 percent.

Men's tennis demolishes Westmont

Cal Poly men's tennis showed no mercy in Saturday's season opener against Westmont.

The men swept the Warriors 7-0, proving that this year's team is both confident and strong.

"The guys competed really well," said Chris Eppright, men's tennis head coach. "Overall, Brandon's play really stood out."

Senior Brandon Fallon, who played both No. 1 singles and No. 1 doubles for the Mustangs, defeated Colin Maglio 6-4, 6-0.

"That was a great win," Eppright said.

Last season, Brent Masi, who played No. 1 singles for Cal Poly, lost to Maglio 7-6 in the third set after a hard-fought battle, making Fallon's win a little sweeter.

"All the guys are playing well right now," said red-shirt freshman Mike Marquez, who crushed Erik Vanslukan 6-2, 6-2 in the No. 5 position. "I really feel like we're more of a team this year, and that that has showed in our play."

Senior John Cappello, who beat Mike Lastid 6-1, 6-3, also sees a change in the attitude of his teammates.

"Everyone wants it (the Big West title) bad this year," he said. "Our team is young but strong, and we're looking forward to competing well with a lot of good teams."

Rounding out the singles lineup for the Mustangs was sophomore Brian Kent in the No. 2 position, who defeated Shea Mercado 6-2, 6-2; freshman Nick Carless at No. 4, who dominated Sul Jens 6-1, 6-0; and freshman Stacy Meronoff at No. 6, who shut out Ed Greus 6-0, 6-0.

"It was a great feeling to get our first home win of the season," Meronoff said. "This team is really committed to each other and everyone has a 'give it all you've got' attitude."

Meronoff also said that Fallon and
